The Killer

JAMES CAGNEY—as "Rocky" Sullivan in "Angels With Dirty Faces."

"Angels With Dirty Faces" Brings Cagney and O'Brien to Capitol

"Dead End" Kids, Humphrey Bogart and Ann Sheridan Also in Cast of Smash Melodrama—Powerful Story of Human Conflict in America's Slums

Dedicated to the thousands of slum boys who next week or next year must choose between crime or honesty, "Angels With Dirty Faces" is a gripping story of two boys from the slums, who, thru a strange quirk of fate, grow up at opposite ends of the social order by a conclusion as thrilling and human as ever produced for the screen.

The great cast assembled to play the roles in the film show at once the care which went into the production. Besides Cagney and O'Brien, the six principal climactic scenes which shows Cagney walking "the last mile" is probably one of the greatest of all time in motion picture history. The ending itself, which for obvious reasons, should remain undisclosed, takes its place with such powerhouses as those of "Public Enemy," "I Am a Fugitive," and "They Went For Me."

James Cagney's role is masterful for him. A brash, tough, cocky ruffian who grows up to be a higher gangster is Cagney's forte, and that the role will bring him again to the top spot in male cinema ranks goes without saying.

Pat O'Brien as the out-gangster yet two-faceted priest, gives an amazing performance, restrained yet powerful enough to balance

Cagney.

The picture was directed by Michael Curtiz, who turned out among other smash hits, "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and "Top Gun." Curtiz, who shows the former's splendid action and the latter's humanity to hold them into this film which is due to startle the cinema-going public. John Wesley and Warren Duff were the secondary film stars by Rosalind Brown.

Note: This week, as the second in a series of articles devoted to Paragouldian pastimes, we discuss the archaeological collections of J. Harry McPherson. Mr. McPherson is recognized as one of our most distinguished citizens and civic leaders, having served as Postmaster from 1909-14, Mayor 1922-4, Postmaster again 1929-33, and as President of Rotary, Master of the Masonic Lodge, Executive of the Chamber of Commerce. At present he is engaged in diversified farming.

We had heard frequently of J. Harry McPherson's collections of prehistoric smothering-objects, so we went up to his office the other day to find out all about it. What we found was no fascinating that we took up the whole of an afternoon looking and looking.

Mr. McPherson estimates that in forty years of collecting he has accumulated more than 18,000 pieces of chipped stone relics and Indian pottery. His collection has been appraised by curators as one of the finest in existence... in many respects, to that of the Smithsonian Institute. According to Mr. McPherson, the Mississippi Valley—particularly this section—looked upon as the most fertile field for the study of Archeology on this continent... Some of the antiquities found in burial mounds in this area were made from stone from Virginia, Minnesota and Mexico, indicating wide

As We Go To Press...

Paul E. Arthur, Diesel engine in charge of installation of the power system of the Municipal Light Plant, announces that the Diesel Diesel engine has been mounted and the work of setting auxiliary equipment is progressing nicely. He expects to start two shifts next week to further speed up the work, but he said it was impossible to determine at this time whether the plant would be in operation in time to furnish street lights for Christmas.

The Garden Club sends a reminder of their Bazaar Party Monday night at 7:30 in the Agricultural building on the High School Campus. The purpose of the party is to raise money for prizes to be given in the annual Christmas lighting contests. They say it will be well attended, too.

The Athletic Committee announces some sort of Big-Sign for Friday week at the Kinway Club in the interest of the football season fund. Plans aren't completed, but watch for further announcement.

Everyone a Partner

The 1933 Christmas Seal Campaign is on and asks every citizen the opportunity of partner, to aid in the great campaign, to eradicate tuberculosis. The design, which pictures a victorious soldier and two children fighting a candle, takes its hold on that day when tuberculosis was looked upon as a destructive scourge of Providence—hopeless hereditary disease about which nothing could be done.

CHRISTMAS SEALS

One thing about this somewhat every Arkansas weather: it always allows us struggling artists who have a weekly scribble something to write about. Of course anybody in his right mind and with a minimum of perception knows that this spell (we old timers call it that) is the achyest so much as a bright and shining March of April day. But I like weather and I like to write about it and if you don't why to write about the Alimance? But back to spring. It even has the thrill in folded. This morning I saw old eight blackbirds, ten genuine article, old boys, having themselves a time in the peck trees. Speaking of birds, what has become of the millions of sparrows we used to have? There are still enough for a quorum, but their population is on the decrease it seems to me. If children haven't changed a great

March of Time Tells Story of Foreign Policy

Entitled "The Story of the Good Neighbor," the current release of March of Time, appeared Wednesday only in the Capitol reports on the State Department's work to keep the U. S. out of war and pursue a "good neighbor" policy. This is the only behind-the-scenes State Department picture ever made—more than six months were required to photograph its material.

In order to present a comprehensive and well-organized picture of the functioning of the State Department, March of Time's editors camera crews into more than 20 countries. In photographic State Department personnel at work they actually traveled a distance of more than twice around the globe.

In the film, Secretary of State Hull is in exclusive interviews discussing the aims of his policies, and the picture reveals why he believes they will keep the U. S. out of war and conquest. Nazi Germany's influence and bid for power in South and Central America. Also shown is the extent to which the U. S. program has been challenged by Germany from her newly gained position in Europe and by Japan in her demands in
