

Determine What Resources Are Available in that Area

- Do research to determine the places that have information or materials you can use.
- Resources can include libraries, archives, genealogical societies, historical societies, courthouses, vital record offices, churches, funeral homes, chambers of commerce, cemeteries, schools, and fraternal organizations.
- Frequently, genealogists ignore regional archives or regional libraries that may contain useful records.

